

Two English gentlemen, Mr. Perry and Mr. Douglas, are admiring the sunrise from the summit of Mount Rigi.

- Mr. Perry: Good morning Mr. Douglas. I hope you had a good night's rest. Look at this glorious sunrise! What a wonderful day this will be!
- Mr. Douglas: Good morning Mr. Perry. Fortunately, I slept like a log. I set the alarm clock because I was anxious that I might miss the sunrise. But you are right. Isn't it just marvelous at dawn up here on Mount Rigi?
- Mr. Perry: I fully agree. I have never seen anything like this. And I have been up on quite a few mountains already. Look at all these people. They all seem to be enjoying this terrific view as well.
- Mr. Douglas: Too bad I don't know all the names of the surrounding summits. I wish that somebody was here who could name them.
- Mr. Perry: I assume that the owner of the hotel would be able to tell you more about them.
- Mr. Douglas: As you already mentioned, it's going to be another magnificent day. I wonder whether I should stay a little bit longer and admire the view or whether I should go inside and have a nice cup of coffee. I've heard that the Swiss milk and these famous croissants are delicious.
- Mr. Perry: May I suggest that you and I have breakfast together and plan how to spend the rest of the day?